Beauty in Commerce. Beauty and utility are convertible terms, as may be seen in the phrases and the facts they represent, the beauty of utility, the utility of beauty. But if you must separate the two, be careful how you give priority to utility over beauty. Utility first, beauty afterwards, is a legend which, nicely considered, will searcely hold. All praise the flower for its beauty, though it has little or no fragrance. Attur of roses has commercial value, but a tender regret arises over the so many sweet flowers that have to be sacrificed to obtain it. The emblems of the three kingdoms, the thistle the of the three kingdoms, the thistle the W. N. RANDALL, CROCKERY dearer to the popular feeling than the constitutional liberties which their union represents and secures. Scotland is best known through its songs and its fictions; "the land o' cakes" is still more the land of Burns and Scott : Treland is to us the land of fervid and graceful oratory : above all its other glories, the glory of England is Shakespeare. The BENJAMIN J. MAYO, 5 glory of the Greek was in his art and in his thought; the glory of Italy is in its music; of Germany in its scholarship; Q No. 887 Broad St., Newark, of France in itself-the genius of France -la belle France; of Spain, in its bolero, and other graceful Spanish dences. In letters, in all the arts of expression, beau Sterling Silver & Plate and every ty is the sait that not only seasons but preserves. Or as Horace Walpole better phrases it, "Without grace no book can in new tints of Satin Lined Morocco Cases. Lve; with it, the poorest may have its | S Broken Ware Repaired, Worn-off life prolonged." Even in the useful, as distinguished from the fine arts, beauty leads the way, the affections follow. Note the circumstance that, even in trade, a handsome thing is worth more than a homely, though of the same kind and of equal utility, and perhaps of better materials, better made. The French more than any other people, profit from their recognition of this. They are, in more ways than one, a designing people They understand that the shortest way to the world's pocket is through the Plumbing and Gas Fitting, and SHEET world's tastes. Thus they make and sell to the world what the world could just as well make for itself, if it only knew enough to put as much of beauty into the products of its skill. Modern deco rative art, too, is mainly of French origin, and it is chiefly to these oreumstances that the French are among the Bloomfield and adjacent towns and country, solicits richest peoples in the world, and they a continuance of the same, trusting that a scriet would be to day the wealthiest but for attention to all business entrusted to him, will mer their great standing armies and so frequent and impoverishing wars. They extend their ideas of decoration even to character. There is no finer piece of art -and of artifice, than a Frenchman,except it is a French woman. Excuse me ! Her love of beauty is her highest distinction; her possession of it her highest grace, personal or of mind. What so charming as her letters? The style is always graceful where the heart guides the pen, as with her. The softest of pi lows to repose upon, too, the heart o the French woman, as one of the most graceful of her sex, is the richest of treasures to dream of. And for the Frenchman, he affirms merit by conferring upon it a "desoration," as one o this or that order of merit. Less cuu ning men have spure only for the heels, he puts them on your heart ; spurs ! emulation, in the shape of those pretty little bits of metal and ribbon that help to make a man twice as ingenious of

brave that he may get to wear them. Though by no means insensible of these so obvious considerations, I am CHANDELIERS, BRACKETS, ETC afraid our American manufacturers are not sufficiently appreciative of the value of beauty in the forms they give to the products of their skill and enterprise. Else why is it that so many of our wares of the costlier kinds, and particularly ornamental articles of household furnituring, are of foreign make, and especially French? A manufacturer ought. to be almost as solicitons of the beauty of the products of his industry and taste a young girl of the beauty of her person, as the matter of beauty is nearly as important for him as to her, ensuring to bim customers, as to her a throng of lovers, when perhaps nothing else will. If this is so, and it is also true that it cannot be said of our American manufacturers seathetically, however it may be theologically, that "grace abounds" among them, then the subject is one of ets, etc., etc. national interest and importance. And Kindling and Cord Wood, certainly very much of our national poverty to-day is due to our having heretofore so largely imported our expensive | KINDLING WOOD, per barrel. erticles of taste and beauty, while exporting only crude products unskilled industry. An unskilled and asteless nation can only expect the fate of the unskilled laborer, namely, to be included in the despoiled class of the overworked and the underpaid. After all, coarse products stand for coarse mir is, and it is even difficult to respect either-the more refined the nature affeeted by them, the more difficult. Therefore the march of democracy, as well as the march of commerce, is a march of beauty. But I am here running out to the remoter suggestions connected with the subject, which were bes left to the reader, rather than that I should get too far away from my theme, which is, strictly, Beauty as an Article of Commerce, - C.N. Boves.

Stolen Property Recovered.

Horse thieves have been operating recently in the vicinity of Montdair, and among the sufferers was Mr. H. A. Chittenden, who recently lost a colt and dam. The property was supposed to have been taken West, and a man was arrested at go, but the thief and property bave ciation a been found nearer home. It appears a large de that the more was stolen by one Sam illustrati Dunlop, a notorious obstracter, originally—so far as known—of Sparts, Sussex country, but who has roamed through the country, thieving everything he could lay hands on. He is now wanted for some misdeed—forging, it is said—by the Sassex country authorities. This man worked a short time on the Chittenden place, but had left a few days before the property was taken. It seems he took it to Paterson and traded the cold to Frank Couklin, of Hoppert's livery stable; Conklin is mrs sold it to a Mr. Berden, in Bergen country, with whom it was found, for $1.2—it is worth at least $100. When Chief Grant got on the secut, and was entistied that he knew whose entires the cold was, he belegraphed to mbere the colt was, he telegraphed to Mr. Chittendes in New York, and the owner came, went out with the Chief | Bear and fully indentified the property. In said there fact, he was so stracked to the colt, that aroter he ran and clasped it in his arms. The book, to
